

SMALL TEACHING: EVIDENCE-BASED TEACHING STRATEGIES

Wednesday, September 17th
12:00 - 1:00 PM
Wilson Room, Pfenning

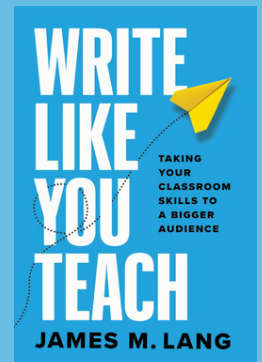

During this workshop, Dr. Lang will share insights from his book Small Teaching about how modest, research-backed teaching changes can lead to outsized impacts on student learning. Participants will leave with practical ideas for course design, ready-to-use approaches to enhance learning, and effective teaching practices.

WRITE LIKE YOU TEACH: TAKING YOUR CLASSROOM SKILLS TO A BIGGER AUDIENCE

Wednesday, September 17th
4:15 - 5:30 PM
104 Kirby Hall of Civil Rights

In this presentation, Dr. Lang will help attendees adapt effective college teaching strategies into successful writing for a general audience. Participants will reflect on how readers learn, and leave armed with tools to foster exploration, creativity, and engagement in their own writing.

Join us in kicking off the “Forging Connections: Championing Science, Learning, and Higher Ed through Effective Communication” series with a lecture and workshop from Dr. James Lang. Dr. Lang is the Professor of Practice at the Kaneb Center for Teaching Excellence, University of Notre Dame and a renowned expert on teaching and learning whose research-based insights have transformed teaching practices across higher education.

This series is sponsored by: Center for the Integration of Teaching, Learning, and Scholarship, College Writing Program, First Year Seminar Program, Hanson Center for Inclusive STEM Education, Landis Center for Community Engagement, and the Office of the Provost.
